What is a Hairdresser?

A hairdresser is someone who specializes in cutting, colouring and styling hair in order to enhance or maintain a person's appearance. Hairdressers are also referred to as hairstylists.

Hairdressing is a reputable and well-established career that is attractive to many because of its high demand and flexibility of operations. A hairdresser can work as an employee of a salon or as an independent contractor. Hairdressers can be either male or female. Most hairdressers have a broad range of skills, but some specialize in processes and techniques such as:

- Hair Colouring and Dyes
- Artificial Hair Extensions and Weaves
- Chemical Relaxing and Straightening
- Perms
- Hair Plugs
- Wig Styling
- Braiding

What does a Hairdresser do?

A hairdresser will typically address all things related to the appearance, styling, and grooming of hair on the head. A hairdresser will listen to the client first, and make sure they have a clear understanding and expectation of the desired results. Hairdressers will often refer to photographs and pictures in beauty and style magazines to visualize the look desired by the client. They must continue with their training and education in order to be able to offer clients the latest style or cut.

Many hairdressers take part in hair competitions in order to keep up to date with the latest styles and cuts.

The largest task often performed by hairdressers is the actual cutting of hair. Clients seeking a new look or just requiring a trim will seek out the services of a hairdresser on a regular basis. Hairdressing is also referred to as hair styling and is the process of styling the hair in a desired way to enhance the appearance of the individual. There are many styles that a hairdresser must know in their profession including:

- Curly styles, and knowing the most flattering way to cut curly hair
- Straight styles, and knowing how to cut poker straight hair
- Short styles
- Long styles
- Complicated up-do styles for weddings and formal events

A hairdresser also serves as an expert in the area of hair care and often will sell products that they are knowledgeable about and would like to recommend to clients. Some hairdressers go on to develop their own line of professional hair care products. Hairdressers may serve as consultants or editors for beauty and style guides.
